I DUN THE TUN

or
FROM WHEELSLIP TO MOLYSLIP
by "Red Bob"

"Er, Willie—I jus dun the tun."

"Oh yer?—wot, on yer rotten old trickle chaser—yer couldn't do the tun over the end of Beachey Head."

"Oh yes I 'ave," said voice number one.

"I'm not goin' to corl yer a liar in front of yer bird, but I reckon wot you done is tuned yer speedo." Voice number two transferred his attention back to the juke box.

Voice number one looked affronted.

"I 'ave just super-tuned my machine and wot with my hexperience it is now 15 miles an hour faster than wot it was."

Voice number two turned away from the juke box.

"Wot yer know abaht tuning I could stuff inside my main jet wivart stoppin' the fuel flow," he said.

The time for a duel was rapidly approaching. The two left the cafe, closed the door, opened it, walked back and sat down. The total time that elapsed was just that.

"There, I told yer," said voice number one.

Voice number two was obviously impressed.

"I was 'avin' wheel slip," he said by way of an excuse. "Anyway wot 'ave yer done?"

"I've tuned it wiv some of this Molyd, —Molidid, —Moly-watsit stuff," voice number one told him.

"Cor," said voice number two. "Wot's that?"

Voice number one was confidential. He leant over the table and whispered, "It's 'ighly technical. Sort of like 'erring scales! Fousands of 'erring scales orl ground up little and mixed in wiv yer oil. Bloke at work wot uses it in 'is car give me some."

"Yers, but I bet it's not real 'erring scales, I bet it's plastic 'erring scales," said voice number two.

Voice number one aired his knowledge. "Nah, of course its' not real 'erring scales, I just said it was like 'erring scales."

"Don't they smell?" asked voice number two refusing now to believe it was anything but "'erring scales." "When my mum's cooking 'errings I always goes for a burn-up—I sometimes comes 'ome to one as well." He laughed. The pick-up of the juke box jumped three grooves.

A large, well padded leather jacket approached the two.

"Ulloh Sil," said voice number one.

Sil peeled herself down to a presentable 36-24-38 and sat next to the rider with the reversible crash hat.

"Er, Willie—I ju' dun the tun," she said.

"I know," said voice number two. "You bin using 'erring scales!"
