SINCE 1737

FROM FATHER TO SON EIGHT GENERATIONS OF WATCHMAKERS

As far back as 1737, the first member of the Favre family to be a watchmaker was practising his art at Le Locle, then a small village in the Jura mountains of Switzerland. His son was for half a century a close collaborator of his brother-in-law Jacques-Frederic Houriet whom historians call "the father of Swiss chronometry." In the XIX century, several Favre-Leuba made long overseas pioneering journeys particularly to Brazil and India. Under the name Favre-Leuba & Co. they opened a comptoir in Bombay where valuable experience in tropical climates and exigencies was gained. Later sister companies were also formed in Pakistan and Singapore. In the meantime the home head-quarters were moved down to Geneva and new subsidiaries opened in London, New York, Hamburg and Lisbon. This tremendous activity is all the more remarkable that it is the fact of eight generations under the sign of quality and precision. Such a wide horological experience, more than 200 years old, is undoubtedly the GUARANTEE that YOUR FAVRE-LEUBA WATCH will faithfully serve you under all climates.
